Do you, or a member of your family, have a physical, sensory or intellectual/cognitive disability?

Are you 18 years+ and from a Syrian or Iraqi refugee background?

Are you interested in joining a workshop to talk about information and resources that would help people from refugee backgrounds to access Australian services?

Researchers at Deakin University, Victoria, UNSW Sydney and Black Dog Institute in partnership with refugee and disability organisations, are conducting a project to co-design resources to increase access to information and services for Syrian and Iraqi people with disability from refugee backgrounds, family members and service providers.

This research will involve:

- Attending one workshop for 1 hour conducted in Arabic. Workshops will be held in Melbourne, Sydney or online;
- Talking about information and resources that were useful, and not so useful, to you since arriving in Australia;
- Suggesting strategies and approaches to make this better;
- Reimbursement for your time with a $100 gift voucher;
- Confidentiality maintained – you will not be individually named;
- Receiving a written summary of the workshop and resources.
